of Mayor Fathers in the city hall, the special committee, appointed by Governor Philipp to investigate the milk question in this section, met this afternoon to form a definite conclusion as to the setting of a price on the milk delivered on the distributors by the producers. The meeting was only open to the members of the committee present and neither the producers or

When the meeting opened the committee members stated that they had sufficient evidence upon which they would base their decision in the setting of the price. The two meetings held in Milwaukee recently made it possible for them to base their decisions and the question before them today was the actual setting.

As to what the price would be there were many predictions and many disputes. It was freely predicted that the price would be above three dollars a hundred pounds. Although the members of the committee refused to make any statements previous to their going into session, it was thought that the price would be $3.20. This price will be based on the findings secured by the application of important formulas as to costs presented by Dean Davenport of the University of Illinois.

nois, and Dean Russell, of the University of Wisconsin. Professor Pierson of the University of Wisconsin was the only one who was not for the milk relative to the cost of producing milk was in the meeting and gave some valuable information.

Under the provisions of the law, the representatives of the farmers and the producers in this section were stationed outside the doors of the committee and were not to give their evidence. The committee, however, refused to allow them to appear and give their evidence personally. The committee then called the representatives set to work and wrote out their arguments and passed them under the door to read if the committee wished.

That the question of arriving at a decision will involve many important discussions was evinced by the fact that the committee was not able to make a decision regarding this city. One representative traveled from La Crosse to appear, but found that it was impossible to get the committee to hear him, which, carried through, would seri-

The decision will be reached this afternoon, it is assured because of the fact that the members of the committee are anxious to complete their findings and hand in the report to the governor. Those who were present are as follows: Mortimer Flack, Walworth county; George Vincent, Kenosha; George Ela, Racine county; Louis Hause, Waukesha; J. L. Fisher, Rock county; John Leber, Milwaukee; James A. Patches, Janesville; J. M. Davenport, University of Illinois; Dean Russell, University of Wisconsin; Professor Pierson, University of Wisconsin.

In Elgin.
Elgin, Ill., Nov. 1.—A strike of lairy men of this district against the low price offered by Chicago distributors for milk effective today, is n. Practically no milk was distributed at the various collecting stations this morning. In neighboring districts it was said the farmers were delivering from fifty to seventy-five per cent of normal quantities.

At Aurora.
Aurora, Ill., Nov. 1.—Fox River Milk producers who went on strike today, when distributors offered them $3.00 a hundred pounds for their products against the $3.71 they asked, stated they were willing and anxious to have state Administrator Hoover fix the milk price.

At Belvidere.
Belvidere, Ill., Nov. 1.—Farmers of Poplar Grove, Caladonia and this city today refused to deliver milk at the $3.00 rate offered by Chicago distributors at Garden Prairie and Cherry Valley. The milk was delivered by arrangement calling for the fixing of price later.

GERMANY PREPARED FOR COMING WINTER

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Berlin, Nov. 1.—Speaking today to congress of workmen, Herr Braun, under secretary of the German food department, told the delegates that the sustenance of German had been assured for the fourth winter of the war. The German potato crop, he said, was between 4,000 and 4,500 tons above the estimate, and the corn supply already had been fully secured.

THE Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. campaign for new members and renewals of old members' certificates has begun. May, June, and July have been most successful. An establishment such as the Janesville Y. M. C. A. is an asset to the city that represents ten fold the actual money contributed. It reaches out and brings men into closer touch with each other who are in various walks of life. Age is no barrier to enjoyment of its privileges and makes a central meeting place for various societies and organizations. It is a public necessity, and if you do not appreciate the wonderful work the Y. M. C. A. is doing the nation over, ask a soldier boy one of the questions: "What do you think of the Janesville Y. M. C. A.?" The answer will be "It is the best thing I have ever seen." The Y. M. C. A. is doing the nation over, ask a soldier boy one of the questions: "What do you think of the Janesville Y. M. C. DISCORDANT ELEMENT.

The element of socialists who are members of the state legislature have met and decided that they desire an election called for the naming of their successor. The socialists would give any candidate they might name not even a look in on the final choice but they do realize that if such an election was held it would give them an opportunity of paying off scores with Robert M. La Follette, who has proven himself a true friend and ally of the people. The plan of the socialists from Milwaukee is too plain on the face of it to deserve consideration for it is but a La Follette wolf in sheep's clothing. We have had enough of La Follette and cannot afford to take any further chances on him. We would rather have a man who would back the good name of Wisconsin as a free word and not a word for anti-government and pro-Germanism. Have done with this nonsense and let's all talk sense.

THE ITALIAN FRONT.

Evidently someone hindered to permit the Anglo-German line to advance so many miles into Italy at the sacrifice of men and big guns. Those who are following the war can appreciate the fact that with the Russian army demoralized, troops needed on the east front could be transported and utilized by both Germany and Austria. It is not a new army that has won this battle, but the veterans of many campaigns on both the east and west front. The retirement of the German troops on the west front indicates that this line has been sapped as well as many of the prisoners now taken are mere boys. However, Italy now gives promise of holding its present position until much-needed support arrives from the English and French lines, and Russia is rapidly reorganizing its army, so we may have hopes that all is not yet lost. One effect the drive has had is to reunite all the various warring political factions of Italy in defense of their country and national life. Of course this will mean that some of the trenches on the west front will be turned over to the American troops who had been expected, but it will be wonderful training and for the men for the grand drive that is to come when a few hundred thousand more Sammies reach La Belle France, fully drilled and well equipped for any kind of service.

BOND SELLING.

If this practice of having grand drives for the sale of Liberty bonds continues half the population will be well equipped to become bond salesmen before the war is over. Of course it will be a different matter to sell bonds that are backed by industrial or commercial securities or blue sky from government certificates that have the backing of ninety odd million of loyal American citizens with their hundreds of billions of dollars. The persons who hold either the first or the second issue of bonds can rest assured that their bonds are worth every cent they paid for them and a little bit more. When anybody tells you the bonds will depreciate, just laugh and if you have money, pay par and buy a few more bonds if you can, and know you have made a good bargain. There will be another bond issue early in the coming year and another demand for loaning the government money, and the amateur bond sellers will have further opportunity to perfect themselves in their new line of activity.

DISTRIBUTING MILK.

The rise in the price of milk has been one of the onerous features of the high prices. Milk distribution systems are so notoriously unscientific that it is the public's own fault if it pays an unreasonable price. It is perfectly ridiculous that in most towns half a dozen or more milk carts will run up and down the same street. There is but little need of the milk cart. The public has been educated by high prices to carry home a large part of the purchases it makes. Why not milk also? Milk dealers are being started in many large cities to distribute milk to all corners for ten cents a quart, where it had been 14. In towns near the source of supply it could be sold for less. If the milk wagon is cut out, the cost of milk can be reduced a third.

When Kaiser Bill left hundreds of millions of German property over here, where our government could seize it, it never occurred to him that our folks would care about such a little thing as sinking a lot of our ships.

The people who can't have a meatless day today because they are going to have a meatless day next week, want to have a meatless day next week, because of the meatless day the succeeding fortnight.

After patriotically wearing khaki many girls proceed to the ice cream joint and put down in the form of soda and candy, a lot of the sugar needed by our allies.

Why complain of scarce fuel, when there are so many of those ugly advertising signs erected along country highways that everyone would be glad to see knocked down?

Sheep clubs are being formed to promote the raising of mutton wool and mutton, but the best form of a sheep club is a double barreled shotgun for mongrel dogs.

An etiquette writer asks the question, "Do you drink in public?" To which the Gentle Grouch replies, "Not if there is any less obvious means of attracting attention."

No doubt Kaiser Bill was disappointed that the Antilles transport that he sunk didn't have any women and children on board.

When a man sees a newspaper for $10.000 it is mighty strange he doesn't call it $1,000,000 as his chances of getting it are equally good.

It is denied that advertising billboards are useless, as when knocked to pieces they make a splendid open hearth fire on these cool nights.

The new political party is considered a success, as the founders of it got one insertion of their names in the paper without charge.

Deer hunting season is reported unsuccessful, as so many of the hunters are drafted that those who are left can't find anything to shoot at.

Up to date the hotels and restaurants haven't made any extra charge for water, but no doubt they'll attend to that detail soon.

From the desperation with which the Germans fight, it is suspected that they fear the right of self-government will be forced upon them.

Just Folks
By Edgar A. Guest.

GOOD BUSINESS.

If I possessed a shop or store I'd drive the grouchies off my floor. I'd never let some gloomy guy offend the folks who come to buy. I'd never let a boy or clerk with mental colicache at his work. Nor let a man who draws my pay. Drive customers of mine away.

I'd treat the man who takes my time And spends a nickel or a dime With courtesy and make him feel That I was pleased to close my deal. I'd never let a clerk who can't tell His way want stuff I have to sell And in that case then glad he'll be To spend his dollars all with me.

The reason people pass one door To patronize another store, Is not because the busier place Has better silks or gloves or lace, Or cheaper prices, but lies in pleasant words and smiling eyes; The only difference, I believe, Is in the treatment folks receive.

In response to a request sent from the government in regard to the conservation of food, the committee met last evening to discuss ways and means to comply with the government's request. It is requested that in each home there shall be observed four or five needless meals, and that every meal be a wasteful one in every week. To see that this order is complied with the city has been divided into six districts and a committee of four persons will represent each district. Tickets for the week will be given to each home and the score for each family recorded on these tickets daily. On Saturday these tickets will be collected so that the committee may know how well each household is complying with the food question and a report made to the government. Even the rural routes will be formed into districts for this ruling applies to every family whose post office address is Evansville.

We know that as a nation we must conserve our food supply, and if we do not realize it yet, it must be brought home to us. Winter is upon us and all over this broad land of ours, training camps are situated with thousands of men that the government must care for. Our battleships with their thousands of men in service in the navy must be provided for, and already we have an army that is doing service in foreign lands. They too must be cared for. Surely we, in our homes, are patriotic and loyal enough to be willing and glad to refrain from eating what bread one day, to go without meat for two meals each day and to bend every energy to see that nothing is wasted any day. More and more we are learning that we soldiers at home have our duty to do our loyal service to give. The sooner we get into training the better.

News Notes from Movieland

—BY DAISY DEAN—

Frank Mills is one of the busiest leading men in pictures. In addition to creating the part of Dwight Alden, opposite the celebrated star, Ethel Barrymore, in Metro's screen version of the Sidney McCall novel, "Red Horse Hill," he is rehearsing in "Art and Opportunity," a forthcoming stage production under the management of Oliver Morosco. In the daytime he is working in the studio in support of Miss Barrymore, and in the evening he is rehearsing for the stage production. A patriotic interest is attached to "Art and Opportunity" since its English author, Harold Chapin, who was an aviator, was recently shot down while on scouting duty inside the German lines.

Frank Mills is one of the most valuable members of the Metro forces. He has recently appeared opposite Emily Stevens in "A Sleeping Beauty" and "The Wheel of the Law." He was starred in the Kay-Bee Triangle picture, "The Moral Fabric," and has been a featured player in "The Golden Claw," "The Edge of the Abyss," for the same company and for Famous Players, "The House of Mirrors" and "The Flower of Faith." On the speaking stage he has appeared in the support of practically every well-known star in America and England. In the London production of "The Three Musketeers" he played Athos to Sir Herbert Tree's D'Artagnan. "Bought and Paid For," "Money" and "The Family Cupboard" have been his most prominent American successes. Mr. Mills was born in Kalamazoo, Mich., and was educated at the University of Michigan.

FROM USHER TO STARDOM
Bryant Washburn used to be an usher in a Chicago theater. He has promoted to ticket seller and eventually succumbed to the lure of the artistic side of the stage. As a member of a very wretched stock company Washburn got to see a large part of country, including the entire state. It is not on record that his company ever invaded Cleveland, but Washburn and his co-artists entertained the natives of Lake Erie for several months. Washburn married after he came to the screen, his bride being Mabel Forrest, whom he met at the Essanay studios.

For some time there has been a persistent rumor that Mary Pickford and her company were going to leave the town studios for good after the completion of her current work. The little star denies that she is going east and says she will remain in the west for at least seven more months. Which of her present contract will be completed there.

It is said that Helen Holmes has escaped death more than 200 times in the last five years.

Mr. O'Hara plays the title role, of course, and is joined by Robert Emmett O'Donovan, the principal character, a manliness and naturalness that makes him the strongest dramatic figure seen in an Irish play in several seasons. Mr. O'Hara has provided Mr. O'Hara with a strong supporting company, and the scenes, all of which are laid in Wicklow, Ireland, the early part of the last century, are said to be picturesque and true to the locale and period. At Terpsichorean Hall All This Week

This is the opportunity for Janesville housewives to learn the economy and efficiency of the Electric Range.

The cost of operating an Electric Range is really very small indeed.

Aside from the economy of operating, the Electric Range saves materials. There is less shrinkage in a roast of meat when roasted in the electric. The Electric Range will save you fifteen per cent in materials.

Readings of the meter will be made, and the cost of operating the Electric Range at the cooking school will be announced.

Men in Training

Fighting isn't the only duty of a soldier, and exposure to bullets is not as serious as exposure to all kinds of weather and dampness. Rheumatic aches, sore and stiff muscles, strains and sprains, chilblains and neuralgia, all are enemies of the soldier, and the relief for all these pains and aches is Sloan's Liniment. Clear and convenient to carry or use; does not stain, and penetrates without rubbing. Generous sized bottles, at all druggists. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive, home-made remedy in quickly loosing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The nasal throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, 60 cents worth, into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have a full pint—a family supply—of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Beyond the Frontier

by RANDALL PARRISH

A Romance of Early Days in the Middle West

Author of "Keith of the Border," "My Lady of Doubt," "The Maid of the Forest," etc.

"Monsieur," I said firmly, "I understand your proposition, and refuse it. I will make no pledge."

"You leave him to die?"

"If it be God's will. I cannot dishonor myself, even to save life. You have my answer. I bid you go."

Never did I see such look of beastly rage in the face of any man. He had lost power of speech, but his fingers clutched as though he had my throat in their grip. Frightened, I stepped back, and Chevre's pistol gleamed in my hand.

"You hear me, monsieur—go!"

He backed out the door, growling and threatening. I caught little of what he said, nor did I in the least care. All I asked, or desired, was to be let alone, to be free of his presence. I swung the door in his very face, and fastened the bar. Through the thick wood his voice penetrated in words of hatred. Then it ceased, and I was alone in the silence, sinking down nerveless beside the table, my face buried in my hands.

I had done right; I knew I had done right; yet the reaction left me weak and pulseless. I saw now clearly what must be done. Never could I live with this Cassion; never again could I acknowledge him as husband. Right or wrong, whatever the church might do, or the world might say, I had come to the parting of the ways; here and now I must choose my own life, obey the dictates of my own conscience. I had been wedded by fraud to a man I despised; my hatred had grown until now I knew that I would rather be dead than live in his presence.

If this state of mind was sin, it was beyond my power to rid myself of the curse; if I was already condemned of holy church because of failure to abide by her decree, then there was naught left but for me to seek my own happiness, and the happiness of the man I loved.

I lifted my head, strengthened by the very thought, the red blood tingling again through my veins. The truth was mine; I felt no inclination to obscure it. The time had come for rejecting, and action. I loved Rene D'Artigny, and although he had never spoken the word, I knew he loved me. Tomorrow he would be in exile, a wanderer of the woods, an escaped prisoner, under condemnation of death, never again safe within reach of French authority. Ay, but he should not go alone; in the depths of those forests, beyond the arm of the law, beyond even the grasp of the church, we should go together. In our own hearts love would justify. Without a quail of conscience, without even a lingering doubt, I made the choice, the final decision.

I know not how long it took me to think this all out, until I had accepted fate; but I do know the decision brought happiness and courage. Food was brought me by a strange Indian, apparently unable to speak French; nor would he even enter the room, silently handing me the platter through the open door. Two sentries stood just without—soldiers of De Baugis. I guessed, as their features were unfamiliar. They gazed at me curiously, as I stood in the doorway, but without changing their attitudes. Plainly I was held prisoner also; M. Cassion's threat was being put into execution. This knowledge merely served to strengthen my decision, and I closed and barred the door again, smiling as I did so.

It grew dusk while I made almost vain effort to cut, and, at last, pushing the powder plate away, I crossed over, and cautiously opened the wooden shutter of the window. The red light of the sunset still illumined the western sky, and found glorious reflection along the surface of the river. It was a dizzy drop to the bed of the stream below, but Indians were on the opposite bank, beyond rifle shot. An considerable force, a half-dozen canoes drawn up on the sandy shore, and several fires burning. They were too far away for me to judge their tribe, yet a number among them sported war bonnets, and I had no doubt they were Iroquois.

So far as I could perceive elsewhere, there was no movement, as my eyes traveled the half-circle, over a wide vista of hill and dale green valley and dark woods, although to the left I could occasionally hear the sharp report of a rifle, in evidence that besieging savages were still watchful of the fort entrance. I could not lean out far enough to see in that direction, yet as the night grew darker the vicious splits of fire became visible. Above me the solid log walls arose but a few feet—a tall man might stand upon the window ledge, and find grip of the roof; but below was the sheer drop to the river—perchance two hundred feet beneath. Already darkness shrouded the water, as the broad valley faded into the gloom of the night.

There was naught for me to do but sit and wait. The guard which M. Cassion had stationed at the door prevented my leaving the room, but its more probable purpose was to keep others from communicating with me. De Tonty had evidently resorted to diplomacy, and instead of quarreling with the three officers when they approached him, had greeted them all so gently as to leave the impression that he was disposed to permit matters to take their natural course. He might be watched of course, yet was no longer suspected as likely to help rescue the prisoner. All their fear now was centered upon me, and my possible influence.

If I could be kept from any further communication with either D'Artigny or De Tonty, it was scarcely probable that any of the garrison would make serious effort to interfere with their plans. De Tonty's apparent indifference, and his sudden friendliness with De Baugis and Cassion, did not worry me greatly. I realized his purpose in thus diverting suspicion. His pledge of assistance had been given me, and his was the word of a soldier and gentleman. In some manner, and soon—before midnight certainly—I would receive message from Boisrondet.

Yet my heart failed me more than once as I waited. How long the time seemed, and how deadly silent was the night. Crouched close beside the door, I could barely hear the muttered conversation of the soldiers on guard; and when I crossed to the open window I looked out upon a black void, utterly soundless.

Not even the distant crack of a rifle now broke the solemn stillness, and the only spot of color visible was the dull red glow of a campfire on the opposite bank of the river. I had no way of computing time, and the lagging hours seemed centuries long, as terrifying doubts assailed me.

Every now thought became an agony of suspense. Had the plans failed? Had Boisrondet discovered the prisoner so closely guarded as to make rescue impossible? Had his nerve, his daring, vanished before the real danger of the venture? Had D'Artigny refused to accept the chance? What had happened; what was happening out there in the mystery?

All I could do was pray, and wait. Perhaps no word would be given me—the escape might already be accomplished, and I left here to my fate. Boisrondet knew nothing of D'Artigny in his exile. If the way was difficult and dangerous, he might not consider it essential to communicate with me at all. De Tonty had promised, to be sure, yet he might have failed to so instruct the younger man. I clung to the window, the agony of this possibility driving me wild.

Mon Dieu! was that a noise overhead? I could see nothing, yet, as I leaned farther out, a cord touched my face. I grasped it, and drew the dangling end in. It was weighted with a bit of wood. A single coal glowed in the fireplace, and from this I ignited a splinter, barely yielding me light enough to decipher the few words traced on the white surface: "Safe so far; have you any word?"

My veins throbbled; I could have screamed in delight, or sobbed in sudden joy and relief. I fairly crept to the open window on hands and knees, animated now with but one thought, one hope—the desire not to be left there behind, alone. I hung far out, my face upturned, staring into the darkness. The distance was not great, only a few feet to the roof above, yet so black was the night that the edge above me blended imperceptibly against the sky. I could perceive no movement, no outline. Could they have already gone? Was it possible that they merely dropped this brief message, and instantly vanished? No, the cord still dangled; somewhere in that dense gloom the two men peered over the roof edge, waiting my response.

"Monsieur," I called up softly, unable to restrain my eagerness.

"Yes, madame," it was D'Artigny's voice, although a mere whisper. "You have some word for me?"

"Ay, listen; is there any way by which I can join you?"

"Join me—here?" astonishment at my request made him incoherent.

"Why, madame, the risk is great—"

"Never mind that; my reason is worthy, nor have we time now to discuss the matter. Monsieur Boisrondet, is there a way?"

I heard them speak to each other, a mere murmur of sound; then another voice reached my ears clearly.

"We have a strong grass rope, madame, which will safely bear your weight. The risk will not be great. I have made a noose, and will lower it."

I reached it with my hand, but felt a doubt as my fingers clasped it. "It's very small, monsieur."

Dinner Stories

A physician was examining a class of nurses. He described the condition of a patient, and asked one nurse how much morphine, in her opinion, should be administered to the sufferer. "Eight grains," promptly replied the nurse. The doctor made no comment and the girl passed on. When her turn came again she appeared greatly confused, and said to the examiner: "Doctor, I wish to correct the answer I made last time. I want to say that one-eighth of a grain should be given to the patient."

"Too late," remarked the physician without looking up from his question paper. "The man's dead."

Farmer Wurzel and his wife Martha were paying a visit to their nephew, a gallant member of the navy. It was their first visit to the great seaport, where the ship of which their nephew formed one of the crew had been ordered to lie in dock. They were both vastly impressed with the novel sights they saw round and about the docks, and when their nephew, with pardonable pride, led them around to where the great auxiliary cruiser lay they gazed with awe upon the gigantic vessel.

The old man took a few steps nearer to the quay side, and, perceiving an open porthole on a level with his eyes, peered into the interior of the hull.

"Martha! Martha!" he whispered excitedly to the old lady, "look here, lass, what dost think? The blamed thing's holier!"

Madge—"If he bored you so, why didn't you dismiss him?"

Pie—"I saw the edges of two theater tickets sticking out of his waistcoat pocket and I know I should be invited."

Any Firestone dealer will show you a cross section and point out the new mileage features in

Firestone

FABRIC TIRES

No. 1—The Tough, Thick Tread

Many more miles of resistance against the friction of the road.

No. 2—More Cushion Stock

More pure rubber between fabric and tread to save the body of the tire from shocks and bruises and to increase the resiliency.

No. 3—More Rubber Between Layers

Separating the plies of fabric by an elastic wall which allows free play without friction.

No. 4—Reinforcement in Bead and Side Wall

Greatly increases the strength at the junction of tire and rim, and raises the point of "bending" to the widest part of the tire. This one feature alone adds miles to the service of the tire. Wherever Firestones are for sale you can see this section of tire and gain an inside knowledge that will teach you to buy "Most Miles per Dollar." EXTRA MILEAGE AT NO EXTRA COST.
